"If we except Torquato Tasso ... Primalón, the second book of Palmerín de Oliva, is by common consent to be numbered among the army of continuations which fail to contain such merit as their originals may possess. Circumstances immerse it in the famous and diverse scrology, that is, unless its title includes both books under the title Palmerín de Oliva. Yet Primalón was as popular as Spain during the sixteenth century as was Palmerín de Oliva. There were some two editions in the original language between 1512 and 1599. As with Palmerín, a single copy of the first edition is recorded. Catalogue des livres rares et précieux, manuscrits et imprimés, composant la bibliothèque de M. Chéreau, Paris, 1866, no. 990.—H. "... double column.
In partibus divinis legis (col. 15-42), also known as Instituta regu brava divine legis, is a Latin translation by Justus Africanus, a layman of a Greek work by a Paulus, a Persian by birth, educated in Nisibis. Whether the author is to be identified with Paulus, the Syrian bishop of Nisibis, who died in 571, or with Paulus the Persian, who held a dispute with Photinus in 527, remains problematical. cf. Hardewer, Otr. Geschichte der altchristlichen Literatur, v. 5 (1882) p. 384-388; Berthel, Michael. Lexikon für Theologie und Kirche, v. 8 (1898) col. 48.

Annunti Alexandri Evangelium harmonice interpretis Victoris episcopi capuani (col. 225-328) is taken from the Codex Vaticanus, a Vatican New Testament manuscript prepared at the direction of St. Victor, bp. of Capua. The description of the original compilation of the harmony to the Annunti Alexandrinum mentioned by Eusebius, or its identification with the Diatessaron of Tatian remains doubtful. It was compiled about the year 300, patterned on the Diatessaron, cf. Hardewer, ibid., v. 1 (1882) p. 278; v. 2 (1884) p. 261; v. 5 (1882) p. 277.

Ex extima in quibus Evangelia a Victor Capuano latine reddita (col. 328-380), taken from Ferardus, is not derived from Polygry of Irenaeus as the subtitle indicates. cf. Hardewer, ibid., v. 5 (1882) p. 278.

The vigilia servorum Dei (col. 365-372) and De paschaliis homi (col. 373-378), here attributed to St. Nicotius, bp. of Treves, are the work of St. Nicotius, bp. of Hermetia. cf. Hardewer, ibid., v. 3 (1823) p. 602; v. 5 (1882) p. 367. The former is also printed as Epistola xxi, and Trinitas de observatione vigiliantium among the apocryphal letters of St. Hieronymus in v. 30, col. 252-255, of this series.
Commentaria in Epistolam s. Pauli is wrongly attributed to Primasius, bp. of Hadrumetum. The commentaries on the Epistles of the Epistles (col. 412-464) present an orthodox revision by Commodorus Benasir and his pupils of a commentary by Pelagius. cf. Hardewer, ibid., v. 5 (1882) p. 384. The commentary on Hebrews, Ad Hebraeos divi Pauli epistola (col. 685-704) has been variously ascribed to Hermas of Halicarnassus.

Geography of Claudius Ptolemy ... 1932. (Card 3)

The Codex Bezae Cantabrigiae belongs to the New York Public Library. It is a copy of the Geography prepared by Dionysius Nicolaus Germanus (also "Dionysius Nicolaus" or "Nicolaus Dens") in certain earlier reference works, is misconstructed or misinterpreted of the name in manuscript. To the 27 maps from this manuscript here given in full size reproductions, 2 other maps have been added: the Burchard map to the 1500 printed edition of Ptolemy's Geography, and the New World map to the 1522 printed edition of Ptolemy's Geography.

Two hundred and fifty copies of this book have been printed on Charting handmade paper at the New York Public Library, designed by John Archer and printed under his supervision. Colotypes by Max Jaffe of Vienna. This is copy number 60.
